TODAY One of the most difficult things about becoming fluent in French is learning to recognize all of the many idiom expressions – those phrases that mean something different than their literal meanings suggest. Sipping lazy honey On the beaches of time We lounge Sweet memories- days gone, unforgotten Stroll past, whispering Sweet nothings Our hands interlace An insincere barricade As we dance a circle Our love spins The ground beneath our feet- Dead to the common nonsense Alive to life's fulness As our smiles reflect From your love-glazed eyes to my love-dazed soul We listen To the promises of little moments Memories of a better tomorrow Our love Happy Valentines! Schubert: Fantasy in C Major, Op. Let's imagine you are looking at photographs in an album. Je suis In French, they say "sa voiture" even if the owner is a male.
