I went to a state psychiatric hospital, where I did clinicals on a floor where people were criminally declared insane, and most had been convicted of heinous crimes. Bedridden, I slept and cried for months. I still have it on my refrigerator door some 15 years or so later.

The main negativity I remember is the realization that the staff about whom I had heard so much was not as bad as I had feared. This next reader had a horrible time as an inpatient, and her feelings ranged from lonely boredom to the fear of sexual assault. But at the time, it felt like a basically unavoidable tragedy.
